

AND THE RAIDERS OF THE LOST @

Enter the Mojicon!

The Mojicons are the emojicons that populate our emails and texts.

Synopsis

Sadly, this zany bunch of condensed emotions is clueless
about how the Web works!

When a mysterious digital villain steals the @ symbol, all electronic correspondence grinds to a halt.

The Mojicons must embark on an awe-inspiring and dangerous quest to restore their system. Trouble is, they don't know what their 'system' actually is!

Many a jaw will drop on both sides of the screen as the Internet reveals its secrets to both the Mojicons and the kids watching their crazy adventures.

Format

The Cast

Moji

Moji is the most popular guy in the Mojicon village.

His grandpa was the prehistoric Web icon, and Moji is desperate to live up to the fame of his family.

Moji's looking for heroics often gets him and his friends into major trouble.

Fringe

Fringe is naïve girl-next-door.

While Moji looks for trouble, trouble finds Fringe itself. Like she has recently seen an UFO. But nobody believed her, which makes Fringe boil!

Then again she never sits around in a pout for too long.

Brainpot

He is really smart,
but not a nerd.
Brainpot would have easily invented everything, if only everything hasn't been already invented.

And he is smart enough to know in advance that Moji's antics will cost them
both dearly.

Athos

Athos is the embodiment of the “@” sign.

No email can leave or arrive without this little puppy.

He bravely guards the mailbox of the Mojicons’ village, until the day he goes missing...

The studio & authors

The Mojicons TV series is produced at Kolobanga studio, build from scratch in Orsk (Russia) in 2013. Complete with its own production facilities and an animators school, the studio employs Cinema 4D by Maxon as the technology base.

The Mojicons were created by Ivan Mantsurov, a fire engine driver (!), who lives in the gas-drilling town of Nadym in the deep North of Russia (65°32'N 72°31'E).

Since 2004 Mojicons have spread all over the world, as this graphic set was picked by then-AOL's messaging service ICQ (www.icq.com).
